Polymer clay is a fantastic medium for creating bespoke wedding toppers that will stand the test of time. Not only is it durable and long-lasting, but it also has the look and feel of an ornamental figurine that can be treasured for years to come. Once you have used your bride and groom topper on your cake, it can easily be displayed on a mantelpiece or shelf where you can admire it and remember your special day.

That's why it's crucial to make your wedding topper as personal and unique as you are as a couple. With polymer clay, you have the freedom to add details that reflect your personalities, hobbies, and interests, making it a one-of-a-kind piece that truly represents you. From incorporating your wedding colors to adding elements that represent your shared passions, the possibilities are endless. So go ahead and let your imagination run wild and create a wedding topper that you and your partner will cherish for a lifetime.

Polymer clay figures are quite sturdy but can break upon impact. Therefore, always handle them with care and avoid dropping or hitting them.

Keep away from direct sunlight: Exposure to direct sunlight can cause polymer clay figures to fade and discolor. To protect them, display them away from direct sunlight..

Clean with a soft brush: You can clean your polymer clay figures by gently brushing them with a soft bristle brush. Do not use water or any cleaning chemicals as they can damage the clay.

If there are any breaks in your polymer clay cake toppers, don't worry! Polymer clay breaks are usually clean and easy to fix. Simply add a small amount of super glue to the broken area and slot the pieces back together. Be careful not to use too much glue, as you don't want it to spill out and ruin the cake topper. Once the glue has dried, the break should be barely noticeable..
